Vintage or innovation?
The materials and finishes chosen for the Diesel Social Kitchen project show their real vocation for vintage: aged steels and treated woods transmit a "live" effect to the eyes and touch.

MERIT AWARD

In 2009 Scavolini was presented with the prestigious Merit Award by the international body, SGS. An award which endorses the company's constant striving to continually improve its own work in the fields of quality management, environmental protection, respect and safeguarding of its own workers.

Quality Management System
Scavolini has always believed that quality should be prioritised at all levels. For this reason, the company has been implementing a Quality Management system based on the UNI EN ISO 9001 international standard from as far back as the early 1990s. The Scavolini Quality system disciplines every single company process, and the relative certification obtained in 1996 has been renewed ever since.

Environmental Management System
Since 2000, as the first environmental management systems began being developed, Scavolini has perceived the importance of implementing a system based on the UNI EN ISO 14001 standard. The 14001 norm defines the requirements of an effective Environmental Management System, with the aim of improving all company activities that may have an impact on the environment. Scavolini's environmental commitment involves the constant reduction in the use of raw materials and energy, the use of non-polluting raw materials, the reuse of waste material and the analysis of the environmental impact of products throughout their life cycle. This is our tangible commitment towards respecting nature, your families and children.

Occupational Health and Safety Management System.
At the end of 2008, Scavolini Group was the first company of its sector in Italy to obtain the OHSAS 18001 certification, which defines the methods used by companies to identify and evaluate risks associated with their activities in order to prevent them, and optimise and improve safety standards and the health of employees. The certification of the Occupational Health and Safety Management System according to the OHSAS 18001 standard denotes the strong commitment and deep awareness of Scavolini Group in safeguarding the well-being of its employees and collaborators.

It takes a green mind to imagine a better world.

Illustration by Valerio Tizzi

The awareness that, in addition to furnishing, there is the great value of the home, guides Scavolini design towards a new attitude taken to the planet. Green Mind is the name chosen for Scavolini's environmental policy. A policy defined by the personnel ethic, the management of energy resources and the criteria used for selecting materials utilised. Gestures that add up to offer a small yet significant contribution to preserving the earth - our large common home.

Scavolini, with its Sunload design, has achieved its aim of in-house production of green energy for its own plants. The photovoltaic plant, with a total surface area of 57,000 m², annually produces about 4,000,000 kWh which meets nearly all of Scavolini's energy requirements.

For its kitchen structures, Scavolini only uses Idroleb: the ecological, water-repellent V100 panel with the lowest formaldehyde emissions. Even lower than the highly stringent Japanese F* standard (4 stars).

Design for emotions, day-in, day-out

Beauty is something to be perceived through instinct. But that Scavolini pursues through research, in-depth analysis and a solid design culture aimed at creating kitchens suited to everyday use yet capable of stirring our emotions, time after time. Scavolini pursues this objective by collaborating with the top names in the international design scenario. And each time, the end result is a small masterpiece to be experienced with absolute simplicity.

"The current 'image era' has truly enabled the human spirit to rediscover its true essence: and its true essence is creativity. We were born to create."

KARIM RASHID

"It is a great pleasure to design an object that gets displayed in museums. But in the end, our efforts must aim to ensure the widespread diffusion of this object among everyone."

FABRIZIO GIUGIARO

"Scavolini tends to operate all-round. And operating on such a broad spectrum means treating all consumers with equal importance, regardless of their diverging opinions."

GIANNI PARESCHI

"I've always been fascinated by the language of forms and objects: they have a lot to say about the history of man. These are the tools I use in expressing Italian design."

MARCELLO CUTINO

"It has always given me pleasure to think that designing a piece of furniture means 'entering in harmony' with those who, choosing it, appreciate the aesthetic expression, enjoy the sensations it evokes and obtain suggestions from it to identify their lifestyle."

One Italy, so many cultures, so many Scavolinis

In the world of Scavolini, every style has an option. And each option can be laid out in a number of variants such as to be able to say that Scavolini has a solution that is tailor-made to suit every taste. In order to offer everyone the most beautiful solution possible, Scavolini has always collaborated with a great many of the most famous Italian and international designers, great interpreters of taste and innovation. Today, in addition to kitchens, Scavolini also offers living solutions. With the same guarantees, aesthetic quality and accessibility have made Scavolini "Italy's best-seller".

This glossy lacquered composition Prestige White features a large central island with a breakfast top and washing function. The top, between the bases and wall units, is in 6 cm thick Glacier White Corian®.

LiberaMente

A Motus kitchen is a perfect example of design applied to a project created for modern living and the optimisation of space. Each thickness becomes volume, as depth becomes maximum capacity. The harmony of forms is optimised by the choice of the perfect colour matches: in the composition shown in the photograph, the glossy White lacquer of the wall units and the Tundra Grey of the living doors are brought perfectly together by the matt lacquer Mink back and the Light Beige Okite top.

Playing with full and empty spaces, the kitchen becomes a practical place that can never be taken for granted. Matte coloured glass doors for wall and floor units. The worktop is in Quartz. The living area hanging units and tall units feature the innovative Stopsol mirror effect.

Boundless options to furnish your Crystal kitchen. The photograph below shows the glass surfaces, coupled with the white finish on base units and plum finish on columns, adding a fresh and trendy touch to the composition.

On the right, the unprecedented colour combination featuring Coffee Black alongside Leaf Gold, the former on base units and oven columns and the latter on wall units and columns. A unique look for an extremely refined result.

Crystal allows for the use of glass in the kitchen. Owing to the green Karikon texture of the glass door (in the photograph below), this Crystal range composition displays an even more poignant character.

In the composition to the right, the multi-purpose top and peninsula: the large corner surface means that the use of steel establishes an optimal relationship with the glass façades.

This furnishing solution supplements the functions of the kitchen with the places to be. The finishes chosen, here offered in warm hues, are matt lacquers in Porcelain Cream for the floor, wall and tall units and laminated Zolfino Larch for the top and surfaces of the TV area. The end unit of the composition has been designed as an open unit to display shelves and bookshelves.

This version of the cupboards features suspended units which give movement to the domestic architecture. The height of the two tops, on the right in Pewter steel and on the left in Porphyry coloured laminate, unmistakably separates the work area from an area dedicated to breakfast and quick meals.

The design of the Carol kitchen (designed by Vuesse) plays with traditional and modern elements. The doors constitute the kitchen's distinctive element. Pictured on this page, the Aurora Cherry veneered door set against the glossy Beige lacquer of the wall units; on the adjacent page, the Aurora Cherry framed door - the element evoking the classic style - blends harmoniously with the glossy Porcelain Cream lacquer of the wall units.

This composition, with floor units in Dove Grey and wall units in Porcelain Cream, rewrites the logics of space, outlining the "boundaries". The wall units reveal this desire for living, alternating closed and open modules.

Open is a fluid space in which partition walls are eliminated, to live the home as a single ambiance of social well-being. The version shown in the photograph features Bole oak doors matched perfectly with the white lacquer of the three upper doors and the convenient open compartments.

The framed door seems to evoke a classic mood. Entirely modern in its conception, Focus was designed for today's tastes and needs. Frame-and-panel doors with White Oak finish. The 5 cm thick satin-finish steel top is coupled with the steel vertical surface between the base and wall units. The 9.5 cm thick breakfast table is also made of satin-finish steel.

Esprit is a kitchen with a refined style, which contains its classic DNA in the design of the framed door in Chalkboard Tactile fir. This composition shows its ability to live and interpret an elegant and contemporary room, with taste and naturalness.

Regard interprets the new concept of living in the kitchen: living the most vibrant environment of the home at 360°, eliminating boundaries. In the version with Absolute White Oak wooden doors and satin-finish steel worktop it is capable of satisfying, with new living styles, the most sophisticated of tastes.

The Baccarat island composition (designed by Gianni Pareschi) mounts Mink glossy lacquered doors and Dark Brown Oak veneer, while the Botticino Cream top is made of Okite and has an aluminium profile with steel finish.

Eloquent forms coupled with attention to the finest details. Comprehensive compositions with a well-defined personality. The island composition, which features vertical structures combined with gilded cornices and decorations, astonishes with its unconventional luminaires that suffuse a dim light, in the true classic tradition.

Why not choose the "all-dark" solution! It is an audacious choice. The large cupboards that function as both containers and furnishing elements are clothed in seductive glossy dark shades. The solution alternates friezes, reminiscent of noble families, with more contemporary elements reinterpreted in the classic style, such as the handles with methacrylate body: elements of style that blend classic and contemporary tastes.

absolute classic

The decorative taste that emerges from the wall lamps and elegant mouldings also appears in the details of doors, handles and top. Grand Relais (designed by Gianni Pareschi) comes with Cream Oak framed doors, while the top is made of Tiger Skin Granite and fits an aluminium profile with brass finish.

Baltimore is a Scavolini model which has been capable, over the years, of interpreting and reinterpreting the Classical in various eras and in different parts of the world. This composition is characterised by its noble flavour, suspended in time. It gives to the large display cabinets, the motifs and gold inserts, the task of enchanting the public through its unique and sought-after taste. The Absolute White Oak doors (shown below) are embellished by blending with the glass which enhances the lightness of the layout.

In this composition, Baltimora shows its desire to "dress up for the evening", showing off, without overdoing it, the use of matt lacquers and metallic profiles.

Matt black Lacquer with Silver motifs for the doors, Glossy Africa Black Granite with Aluminium profile, steel finish, for the top.

The "style" design emerges from every detail. From the finish to the practical baskets, from the "country-style" look to the cooking zone and masonry cooker hood. Belvedere (designed by Raffaello Pravato) mounts oak doors with Antique Blue finish, in addition to glass doors. Tailor the Belvedere kitchen to your own personal taste down to the smallest detail, in total freedom.

basic evolution

Original volumes give movement to the rigorous lines of the brand new Evolution. The white highlights a young, clean-cut style that is also rational. The Porphyry Touch colour top defines spaces and functions.

Atelier's charm shines through intact even in confined spaces. The black laminate top comes with a backsplash of the same colour and encompasses the central block: the latter includes roomy deep drawers with either dark brown oak framed fronts or opal glass fronts, while the two aluminium end structures offer a practical solution for storing pots and utensils of everyday use.

Among the Scavolini solutions belonging to the Basic range, the Margot kitchen displays a simple yet well-equipped structure that does not neglect all-round performance.

Even the Yellow-Stained Ash version is imbued with that unmistakable atmosphere of old country kitchens. More traditional or more romantic? More classic or more country? Choose your most personal way of experiencing Madeleine.

From space to the desire for a kitchen with a great personality. The classic Easy Highland style brings a desire to socialise into the home, with the pleasure of spending time together, giving the typical warmth of a weekend spent in the countryside to each and every day. The table can become a pleasant dining area whilst the free-standing refrigerator adds a touch of fun originality to the classic, rigorous design of the composition. Note the large hob and original, refined design of the isolated hood, a protagonist-spectator to your time in the kitchen.

Scavolini: the pleasure of being together

The kitchen is increasingly a place that lends itself to "being together", without walls to divide the ambiances, a continuum in space and time with the living-dining area. Thus we need a stylistic contamination between the area used for food preparation and the area of relations, between the space for cooking and the living space, despite their different functions. The kitchen changes, taking on new potential and the living area changes to integrate into the areas of the home that up until yesterday were separate. Today, Scavolini also provides the living area with its capacity to analyse taste trends and public desires, providing truly fascinating home landscapes.
